

ABSTRACT

A generic Java rule engine framework that will permit a rule engine to be called based upon events captured from objects without requiring object programmers to explicitly insert hooks for calling the rule engine within the objects. A business-to-business electronic marketplace can be outfitted with such a framework for acting upon events occurring within objects. The framework comprises utilizing a standard Java debugging interface to accept events and a rule engine to act upon such events.

0438583345 - 0520014